FAQ'S & Info on Import and Export License

What is an Import Export License?

A number or code that is given to the client when they register at customs as an importer or exporter or both. It is also called a customs code or CNN number. It allows an individual or business to clear goods through customs and to make international payments for imported/exported goods.

When is an Import Export Licence needed?

Practically: when the value is above R10 000 or you have imported/exported more than 3 times customs may ask for a license. If you want to make/receive an international payment for imported/exported goods through your bank (if credit card it is not needed but then you have high forex costs)

What do I get once registered?

Your custom's import and/or export code will be emailed to you. Customs will send the original to the postal address provided on the affidavit. If it does not arrive after a month, we can request an electronic copy for the client.
