FAQ'S

Why does all Companies need COIDA Registration?

The Compensation for Occupational Injuries and Diseases Act, (130 of 1993), also known as The COIDA Act in South Africa, requires all companies or individuals, who employ one or more employees, to register with the Workman's Compensation Fund within 7 working days from the date of employment.

The national fund helps employers pay compensation to employees for occupational injuries / diseases sustained / contracted in the course of their employment. To pay reasonable medical expenses incurred or to compensate their dependents for death resulting from such injuries / diseases.

What are the Main Advantages of COID Registration? Firstly, Your Company Is Covered

If you are COIDA registered at the Workman's Compensation Fund, your Company and Employees will be covered in the case of any workplace injuries. This reduces the financial risk that employers face when employees are harmed or injured by something that relates to the work environment and provides protection against civil claims for injury on duty or 'Occupational Diseases'.

Secondly, You Need a Letter of Good Standing for Tenders

Once you are Registered with COIDA, you will be able to apply for a Letter of Good Standing. Most Tenders and Contracts in South Africa require you to have a valid Letter of Good Standing from the Workman Compensation Fund, thus granting you more business growth opportunities.
